BAZAINE'S ESCAPE

The Paris correspondent of the New York Times gives the following details of General B zaine's escape from the Isle of St. Mar-

A short time ago, or after the ex-Marshal had been some seven months in prison, Mme. Bazaine asked MacMahon to change the penalty into exile for life, and while he would have gladely done so, if he could with safety, or without raising popular clamor against him, the President felt obliged to refuse the petition at this time. It was not until this and other attempts had failed that the plan of escaping was accepted by B z ine. He was urged to it by his wife, who pleaded with him daily, and who used one very strong argument. In France, she said, revolutions were frequent, and one might burst upon the country at any moment. If the Radicals were to succeed to power again, by acy charce, the first act of the new government would be to sign the death warrant of Bazaine. Although this is an exaggeration, there can be no manner of doubt that his life would be in danger. It was by constant pleading with him that the faithful wife finally won his consent to leave the island. Some of the journals pretend that he was on parole, but this is absurd. A prisoner does not it mise not to escape unless he gets some privileges in return, and Bazaine has had none whatever. He has been constantly sucjected to rigid prison discipline, has never been allowed to walk, except upon the parapet, some ten feet square, and has been refused nearly all the privileges he has ever demanded. He in d a right to escape, therefore, if he could, but whether it was good policy to do so is a question which can hardly be decided at this time.

All the arrangements for the escape had been completed a week ago, and the parti s concerned only awaited a favorable moment for carrying their plan into execution. Col. Villette, Bazaine's faithful friend, the man wto sat by his side during the trial and who asked to share his captivity, thus giving up his own hopes of advancement, was not allowed to sleep upon the island, but was granted the privilege of coming over for a few hours each day. During the winter Madame Bazaine and her children had been upon the island, but owing to the unhealthy air of summer they had to be sent away. As Madame Bazaine could no long r be confined within the walls, under guard, she PURE DRUGS AND MEDICINES. was allowed to visit her husband at stated periods only, and forced to procure a permit in advance. On Saturday she made her usual visit, and it was on Sunday night that Buznine escaped. The care of the prisoner was confided to only four guards, drawn from the company of one hundred men which comprised the garrison. At night a squad of men picketed before the gates of the forcess. Upon the side of the sca there is a perpendicular descent.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS & PUTTY. side of the sca there is a perpendicular descent of thirty metres, nearly thirty-five yards, and as this side is narrow, no spot was found for placing a sentinel. The guard had to march up on the other angle, at some distance from this telerably safe point. Indeed, owing to the enormous size of the prisoner and his advanced age, it was thought impossible for him to escape from this dangerous point. Moreover, as in the case of Rochefort and the Communists of Noumea, it appears that the Government counted upon the sharks with which the waters are filled to guard the sea side of the castle.

On Sunday the Marshal had passed the greater part of the afternoon upon i is narrow parapet, pacing up and down with Col. Villete; but soon after the departure of the latter B zine went to his room and in a short time retired. About 10 o'click the Commandant made his usual visit, flidding his prisoner in be'. The guard had been set, and the picket post was also visited. It was a dark and stormy night, the mistral bowling about the fortress and raising menacing white cars upon the sea and the black clouds hanging low in the sky, giving promise of rain. Although a steamer had been signalled just at dark, the Command ant felt that the conditions of the night were favorable to repose, and after seeing all things in order he, too, retired. What then passed could only be devined. It is known to-day that about 7:30 on Sunday evening Mme. Bazaine hired a boat, and accompanied by a very young man, started out for a row. A Croisette fish erman recognized the lady, and saw her pulling an oar with feverish anxiety, and steering toward Sainte Marguerite. The beat was soon lost to sight. It was very dark when the boat came upon the island, where Mme, Baz ine and her companion must have lain for several hours tossed about by the storm. Mean while, the Marshal had risen, and, after having attached his knotted rope to the iron bars of the window, had let himself down this giddy height. The rope was found there in the morning, and bearing eleven fresh blood stains upon it to show that the descent was not effected without danger. As the small beat had to keep beyond the surf, Bazaine had to swim in for some distance; but he was soon drawn in by his courageous and loving wife, and the boat was quick y pulled off to the steamer. The pext morning the Italian coast was reached, and Bazaine safely landed at Sainte Remo. It was not until the next morning that the guard had any intimation of the escape of their prisoner, but it seems strange that no one on the island should have seen either the boat close under the wails or the steamer only a short distance away.

The young man who accompanied Mme. Ba-Zine was a member of her family, a young M xican, by the name of Rull. He has several times cruised off the island in a steam yacht, but it was only the other day that the Marshal could be persuaded to leave. Colonel Villette waited at Cannes until the news arrived, when he started for Paris to state what he knew, but was arrested before arriving. He is now in close confinement at Grese. Mme. Villette has gone to meet her husband, but has not yet been permitted to see him.
